Description of Property and Eligibility Determination (Use continuation sheet if necessary and attach map and photo)

This wood frame house is one story high and approximately three bays wide. Vernacular in style, the house features horizontal siding, 1/1 windows, a 1-leaf door, and a cross-gable, asphalt shingle roof with a central interior brick chimney. The house has been greatly altered, and features a shed roof addition on the northeast side with a wood deck.

Located near Crain Highway, this house reflects patterns of residential development that characterized southern Maryland during the early-20th century. Prince George's County continued to be dominated by its agricultural heritage during the first half of the century. Its population between 1910 and 1930 rose from 36,000 to almost 60,000 people, but its population growth was primarily limited to the settlements of the new towns and villages brought about by the Baltimore and Potomac rail lines. As trucks began carrying more tobacco and produce from southern Maryland to northern markets, the demand for better roads grew. After its construction began in 1922, Crain Highway linked rural areas of southern Maryland to urban centers in the north. The resulting increased traffic and economic opportunities benefited both Charles and Prince George's County by spurring increased residential and commercial development along Crain Highway. Development along Crain Highway, however, was not as intense in Prince George's County as it was in Charles County. The farmers closer to the urban markets of Washington began to diversify their crops and began to produce more products for the urban populations.

This c. 1920 structure is not eligible for the National Register. It lacks significance related to events, persons or architecture. Criterion D, information potential, was not assessed for this study.
